How Did You Answer...To Be Or Not to Be?

This Is Your Input!

In the last issue of our AAUW Atlanta newsletter (and during the last couple of Affiliate meetings), your co-presidents asked members to respond to a survey. The survey's intent was to check on the current health of our organization and provide decision-making guidance for your leadership. Questions were drawn from various resources identifying key factors that make a volunteer organization sustainable.

We received responses from approximately 20% of our total membership. The responses indicate that it is essential for our organization to address a number of shortcomings if we are to continue to work together as the AAUW Atlanta Affiliate in our current form.

*In calculating percentages in each response category, write-in responses of 'maybe' were counted as 'yes,' and '?' responses were counted as 'no.'

On average, a little over half of those responding (which translates to a little over 10% of our total membership) responded positively ('yes'). Anecdotal responses expressed disconnection with the national organization and / or mission. Several responses indicated a willingness to continue to participate (with a focus on Atlanta Bookfair volunteer activities) while simultaneously expressing concerns about the ability to do so given personal limitations.

If we take a 'glass half-full' approach and assume that respondents are a representative sample of our entire membership we could say – more than half of us would respond positively. However, on the 'glass half-empty' side, it is more likely that those taking the time to respond are representative of our more engaged, active members. This presents a much more concerning picture regarding the state of the health of our Affiliate, highlighting the urgent need to take action over the coming year.

As I enter the last half of the last year of my co-presidency role – I'd like to share with you all that I am willing to continue to work towards the creation of a stronger organization. Your leadership has been actively discussing ideas to address some of the concerns that the survey responses have confirmed. For example – working more aggressively to identify partnerships with like-minded organizations to provide other activities of interest, as well as potentially grow membership.

I've had the chance to get to know more members over the course of my term as co-president. There is a broad array of professional experience and diverse talents residing within our Affiliate. I invite you all once again to share your thoughts (with me, or any other leadership team member) that you feel would be of help in re-shaping our organization into one that will continue delivering against our mission – achieving a vision of equity for women and girls.

LIFTING ONE ANOTHER UP! Mary Lynn Merkle Diversity Chair

I am sharing some thoughts about women and womanhood written by my grandniece Meghan, a student at the University of Michigan and on the Michigan Daily staff there.

Meghan's article asks the same questions and ponderings that I (and many of you) faced sixty years or more ago. "We've come a long way, baby." Nevertheless, the "road" is still bumpy. On reading her article I felt compelled to continue the pressure for equity and equality even as we seemingly are losing ground—not so much for myself, but for those generations who are coming after us.

Ponder some excerpts from Meghan's article. Do they resonate with you as well?

"There are rules imposed upon women like invisible Minecraft barrier blocks, and that's startlingly clear in professional settings. When entering a professional context or applying for a position in nearly any field, women are tasked with finding the perfect balance. It's possible to be too bossy or too submissive, too girly or too masculine and are you wearing the right length of skirt? The right top? Heels or flats? Be friendly, network, but don't be too friendly lest your eagerness be interpreted as a different kind of interest! Be proactive but don't be annoying. Be chill, but take your job seriously. Don't offend anyone, but don't be uptight either, learn to take a joke!"

"For years, it seems there's always been categories for women to squeeze themselves into, and it's incredibly limiting. ---Instead of pursuing every interest that comes your way, you're boxed in. It's unfortunate knowing there's a world of possibilities I didn't explore because I was too busy fitting the image of what I was supposed to be."

"These categories were supposed to give us community and a sense of belonging but don't even seem to exist in practice. I've never met a girl that simple. Just because you're a girl's girl doesn't mean you can't have moments where you aren't. It's possible to spend time doing your makeup in the morning and be passionate about kickboxing."

"I've seen lots of women judge each other for being too emotional and too sexual and to this or too that. These categories divide us. ----Not one of us is a finite being and to claim that a woman is too much or too little of one thing or another is a disservice to us all!"

"We live in a world that rewards women who push other women down the ladder. That's why lifting one another up feels so powerful."

And finally—"You were never simple, and you were never meant to be. You are a complex bundle of everything. Embrace every part of it."

Thank you, Meghan, for reminding us how important the mutuality, respect and compassion amongst women is.

Let's all try to do some heavy lifting whenever the opportunity arises!

Booth at Westside Market to Close on December 31

by Wendy Venet

The Bookfair Steering Committee, endorsed by the Atlanta Affiliate board, has voted to close our booth at Westside Market. This decision follows a year of lagging sales. However, Westside Market will allow us to hold future sidewalk sales without paying rent, and these sales have traditionally netted us a tidy profit. Please check your email regularly in the coming weeks as we ask for volunteers to help with a final sidewalk sale this year. Thanks to all who have helped with the Westside effort during the past four years.
